Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Diebig of the Bear Creek ranch attended the theater Monday night and while returning home about 1:30 o'clock had a narrow escape from death. The animal was instantly killed and the buggy cringed some distance. Neither of the occupants of the buggy were seriously injured, strange to say, although Mr. Diebig had his arm bruised. Mr. Diebig states that the engine bell was not sounded, nor the whistle blown for the crossing, and that the engineer did not even stop his engine to see what had happened. At the point where the accident occurred, the Denver and Rio Grande and the Midland are parallel and it is often difficult to tell how the trains are coming.

It is authoritatively stated that the statements made recently in the evening paper in regard to an option on Mr. Stratton's Washington place at Cripple Creek were based on false reports. In an interview with Count Pourtales and Mr. Parrish they said that they are not prepared at present to make public their operations in this district. It is true that Mr. Newberry, the celebrated expert of Aspen and superintendent of the Mo. E. Gibson and Aspen Contract mines has been in the camp at their instance, examining several properties and while his report is not published as yet, on leaving Florissant he told Count Pourtales and Mr. Parrish that they might at least say: "that those people who laugh at Cripple Creek will get it."

He said further that Appon was recovering and would get well, he would on yet, whisky now, and that the universal sentiment up there was that Rickets had done just about the proper thing. The play is more elaborate and beautiful than ever. The company embraces some of the best specialty artists in the country. The specialties were numerous and varied. The hit of the evening was made by the Zecopolies, who performed some very remarkable acrobatic feats. The three Zecopolies in an entirely new specialty entitled 'Twiles on Blade of Nois' were very amusing as well as astonishing. The grand Oriental ballet and the dance of the Nautica girls were very well received, as was also the fine dancing of 'The Acacia Camis'."

Louis Workman is a German race man who owns a ranch beyond Tipton on the line of the Rock and who has a very strong prejudice against railroads. When the Rock and extension to Colorado Springs was being projected, he kept the surveyors off his land with a shotgun until he was put under bonds to keep the peace. The railroad was laid through his land and after condemnation proceedings, but he was never reconciled to the deed and he has frequently threatened to cut the section men so full of lead that their graves would be made rich mines in a few years. A few days ago the railroad company began to build snow sheds at the point where they have been worst bothered with fights and this made Workman so outrageous that he was arrested and brought to this city. He had a hearing before Justice Walker on Tuesday night and was held in an aggregate of $37, which he paid.

Cassio Rock is having some water works built, and this man was working in a trench when it caved in on him, crushing him to death. He had just gone to work and very late was shown about him. The county of El Paso has recently received from the billiard of the Gazette Printing company, the first set of mining road books that have ever been needed by the county clerk. Mr. Merri, formerly a citizen of Denver, and for a few days resident in this city, has learned that while a Colorado divorce suit is a very easy and simple piece of machinery to work, there is danger if you put your fingers in the gears. Mr. Merri had one wife and wanted another, so he sent number one east. He then began suit for divorce on the ground of desertion, published a summons in the papers and made a affidavit that he had sent married copies of the paper to his wife. This was a bad mistake, as it was necessary to get his decree and a marriage license soon to follow. It is reported that he is marrying a woman in this city.

When Mrs. Merri, number one came west again she found herself inadvertently a grass widow. She had the happy course prosecuted for adultery, but as she did not work, she has a large and Mr. Merri committed perjury in swearing that he had sent married papers to her. Cave-In at McFerran.

The mines of the Western Coal Mining company at McFerran, eight miles southeast of this city, have been shut down on account of a cave-in. The company has been operating on one side of a dry creek bed and has been desirous of striking the rich beds on the other side of it, because there was an old shaft, a rancy dug across the creek and they would be sure to have a heavy expense of sinking an air shaft. They have been working that way for some time, but the heavy machinery heavily and giving many of coal. A few feet square, every twenty feet. The water from the creek has been worked its way down through the formation and loosened it so far that Wednesday the roof began to bend in. The disturbance continued and on Saturday the men were taken out of the mine. The afternoon the roof gave way and 200 feet of one passageway and 60 feet of another were lost. The roof and sides of the galleries were still creaking and caving on Sunday, and it was feared that the shafts and given way. Tuesday it was found that the great body of coal had come to rest and no more cave-ins are feared. Only one air shaft is known to be the shaft and it is hoped that a change may be created by the end of the week.

"But she hoped he would never speak to her; he would love her in silence, and go back to his own land, thinking of a future wife, while she waited day after day, and did with her name on his lips, just as who must do with the young couple's name on hers. But this, of course, was absurd. So one afternoon, when Lili's pupils had gone out with their maids, Miss King was cussing open the new magazines in the back drawing room, the countess after sitting by her in silence for some minutes, suddenly put before her eyes and said, in a dignified but passioned manner, "I love you!"

"Oh!" she said, and dropped the paper.

The count was quite happy again. He gave his price for the best three-franc ham in Paris that night. In the morning they went on their way to Fontainebleau with half a chicken, a bottle of wine, some butter and rolls in a basket. "We make a little feast," he said; "we sit under the trees, my old and my young." The chicken was good, the wine was excellent; the leaves whispered cheerily; the little birds twittered occasionally; the sunshine flicked the grass with gold—a perfect picnic was successful.

PASTOR'S WIFE.

The First Baptist Church the Scene of a Brilliant Wedding Wednesday Evening.

At the First Baptist Church Wednesday evening Rev. Richard Montague, pastor, united in marriage Mr. Francis Daniel, formerly of the city, and Miss Gertrude White, of this city. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. White, 205 Pike's Peak avenue.

A large number of invitations had been issued and at the appointed hour for the ceremony, 7:30 o'clock, a brilliant gathering of the best people of Colorado Springs and assembled in the large auditorium of the new and beautiful First Baptist church. The decorations of the church were very simple, consisting of palms and potted plants, which completely fitted the occasion.

The bride party entered from the Sunday school room at the rear promptly at 7:30, Professor Peterson presiding at the piano and playing the wedding march from the opera of Lohengrin. The ushers were Mr. Walter Montague, Mr. J. Arthur Conner, Mr. G. E. Townsend, Mr. W. E. DeLong, the bridesmaids followed, the ushers and were Miss Charlotte Pastorius, sister of the groom, Miss Kate Kiefer, Miss Marie De Courcy, Miss Marie Macklin, Miss Stella White, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, came next. The bride entered on the arm of her father, Mr. C. L. White. The bridegroom entered from the pastor's room at the right of the pulpit, accompanied by Mr. Percy Kagerman as groomsmen, and met the bride at the altar. Rev. Richard Montague performed the marriage ceremony most impressively, using the beautiful ceremony of the Episcopal church. Mr. White giving his daughter away. The bride and groom departed to the strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the beautiful home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. White, 205 Pike's Peak avenue, from 8 to 10 o'clock. The wedding was largely attended. Many of the guests were friends from a distance and the local guests among the leading citizens of Colorado Springs. Among those from a distance who were present were Mrs. Harding of Boston, an aunt of the bride; Miss Richardson of Boston, Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Back of Minneapolis, Mrs. Bentley of Denver, wife of Judge Bentley of the district court; Mr. W. Bentley and Mr. Fitzee of Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. White received their guests in the large reception room in the north part of the house, and were assisted by Mrs. Mary Pastorius, mother of the groom, the bride couple and the bridesmaids. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers, and a large and unusual spacious building, was taxed to the utmost to accommodate the crowd of guests. Pleasant and hearty congratulations were the order of the evening, and many telegrams from absent friends were received and opened.

The happy couple were the recipients of numerous and very handsome presents, one of the chambers in the upper portion of the house being reserved for their display.

The young couple start in life with the brightest prospects and the good wishes of all who know them. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Pastorius left for a trip to California.

Mrs. Bradford's Lecture.

The inclement weather prevented a large attendance at the second lecture at the Antlers pavilion by Mrs. Mary C. Bradford. The subject this time was "The Tendency of Modern Art," and it was treated with the same grace and knowledge which were so strong features of the former lecture. The speaker referred to the decline of the old artistic spirit. By some this was taken to mean the death of art. But nothing is more true than that death is in life, and death is only a change to something higher and better. The sun of a new day in art is surely rising and the same tendencies which have been developed in literature are to be manifested in the broader field of art. The tendency of modern art is to give more attention to details, it is democratic in its sympathies and reaches not even the lowest, but it values the soul more than the body and is religious rather than carnal. It was said good by paganism, and it is not open to Christ, and it is at least knows what Christianity is. This is clearly shown in the work of the landscape artists who with a more exact portrayal of nature have earned to show also the divine which is in and joined a nature. The older artists, such as Poussin and Claude Lorraine, failed to appreciate nature and misrepresented it. Their landscapes and their figures were grotesque and impossible. No one can charge them with nature worship. Of the new school, Turner is easily chief. He is to art what Hugo is to literature, what Wagner is to music, the interpreter of life. The speaker then gave a beautiful and highly poetic interpretation of one of Turner's sea pieces. This sea sail was what his son had earned from the sea in his artistic vocation. This is what he has shown on the canvas. Landscape was more convincing and emotional in his art. The old nature and woodcut that he might show her to others as he knew her in grace and loveliness. It is not only the demand and appreciation of the great masterpieces of modern art, but the poor and unlearned as well. In the great galleries of Europe the crowds linger around the greatest paintings and statues. The pictures of Church and Bierstadt in his country are greatly appreciated by common folk.

Another tendency of modern art is that it is pitiful. It introduces no aesthetic horrors that are not distinctly useful. In its architecture each gargyle is the source of a regenerating stream. Modern art is tender. The horrors of the Greek tragedies are being to a past age. The supreme word of the ancient art was beauty. Gentleness was not a quality of the medieval art, but of the renaissance, though it is not absent from them.

Jariness is a characteristic of modern art. It is the base of Jero's sarcasm and of Leech's caricatures. Of Jero's was a forerunner but no ooked on vice and only with contempt, while his followers regard it with sorrow.

The artistic qualities of the terra and Dickens were treated briefly. The work of the American wood engravers was referred to as a foundation for a national art. They deserve to be called master engravers. Artistic culture is also a characteristic of this country is composite yet of an original, in short, American. In portrait painting too the Americans are doing well, and the work of Sargent and his companions is not inferior to that of Mr. Meissonier and Leighton. Of religious painters, Roman Hunt is entitled to a place in the first rank. His great painting, "Christ before Pilate," has been an inspiration and a help to many. It has made life more earnest and God more real. This is in short the tendency of modern art, to show a living God and immortality in the work of this the mission of the art of the future.

News Items from the Gold Fields.

Special Correspondence of The Gazette, December 3, 1891.

Your correspondent has long felt with J. A. Appleton, proprietor of Appleton's note of this place, and his fear of being a coal man. He has a deep gash on the bridge of the nose just between the eyes, the wound is a deep one, but is healing up nicely. At times he has severe pain through his head, which causes him to walk about the room. As a rule, however, he sits in a big rocker and directs and attends to the business of the hotel.

Daily arrivals by stage and private conveyances now number from twenty-five to thirty. Down the are sailing rapidly, and a number of businesses seeking locations. Among them will be two newspapers to be started this week. The hotels are taxed to their utmost to provide for their guests, and their competing visiting the camp about bring along at least one bar bet.

Teams are being advertised for sale on the Buena Vista mine.

Your correspondent has positive information to the effect that a Denver company will soon begin the erection of a 1000-mill mine. A St. Louis company will put up one of a like capacity and a Boston company is to put in one of equal size. A tree of these have been promoted by the same gentleman. These three mills will be located in different sections of the camp according to amount of water supply that can be guaranteed.

Mr. W. E. Guyot, of Pueblo is now erecting a first-class assay office at Squaw Gulch. He will employ a first-class assayer on salary.

The number of letters received and sent from this post office during the month of November was over 5000.

Many letters of inquiry from all classes of people are being received by different residents of the camp, as a result of the exhibition of ores made at Denver during the mining congress. These letters come from teachers, miners, prospectors, merchants, millmen, promoters and real estate agents, and your correspondent has received two from mining experts, who want to examine the whole camp and making a report thereon to be published in the news papers.

New discoveries of mineral are now reported in sections heretofore supposed to be devoid of mineral. They will not be several miles of territory to the city.

BURT COTTRELL.

Mr. E. H. Martin, our new real estate agent who has recently come here from Pueblo, has purchased the handsome residence of Thomas Saunders on Williams avenue. The price is said to be $10,000. The Pueblo people are regretting the removal of Mr. Martin and his family to this place, as he was one of the most prominent citizens of the new city. Some of them cannot understand why he does it, but if they will only come up for a while they will soon understand, as is said.

May Sledge has sold a one-fourth interest in the Oile placer mine, at Crity, to W. W. Gourley for $4,000. The deed to the property was filed yesterday.

POPULATION OF COLORADO.

A recent bulletin issued by the census bureau gives the population of Colorado in detail according to the census of 1890, and the increase during the ten previous years. The report is of great interest to the residents of the state, and all the more so because there is nothing in Colorado so much needs as people. It is true that the natural resources of the state will play an important part in its future development, and they are a primary factor in determining a growth and capital. It is necessary in utilizing these resources, that the state should have the state needs most is people. The opening of mines of coal and iron is not of great benefit unless there are consumers for their products. It is of little use to try to establish manufactures until there is a local demand for the particular kind of goods which is intended to make; all the utilities except those of mining for the precious metals and the use of invalids and tourists require the presence in the state of large bodies of people both as consumers and workmen.

The census report of the population may therefore be taken as a fair measurement of the state's prosperity; it is a table of increase as a showing of the progress of the state in a way of material greatness.

The population of the state as reported in 1880 was 20,327; under the present census the returns show a population of 22,385, an increase of 2,058, or 10.2 per cent.

There have been numerous changes made in county lines since 1880. Twenty-four new counties have been organized from parts of counties then existing. The changes shown are generally caused by increase in territory.

The summary which follows shows the population of each county according to the censuses of 1890 and 1880, and the increase or decrease during the decade:
